Course Goals

This is a course that requires conceptual and theoretical knowledge in order to provide students with the necessary tools to analyze and understand organizational situations. It therefore requires students to use and apply theoretical and conceptual knowledge in their individual reflection process and teamwork.

Following that, at the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Use and apply key concepts in organizational behavior and leadership to understand people's behavior, team dynamics and organizational situations.
- Use critical thinking in analyzing organizational situations.
- Recognize the impact of leaders' behavior on the society and environment.
- Deliver work that contributes to the team's goal. Contribute to a positive team dynamic through own behavior.

Description

Course contribution to program

This course is designed to empower BBA students to cultivate self-awareness and embrace their roles as responsible individuals, collaborative team members, and future leaders. Through the exploration of theories and concepts on human behavior in organizations, students will gain insights that they will apply in researching and analyzing the behaviors of leaders and team members in organizations of their choosing.

Emphasizing the significance of teamwork, the course challenges students to actively develop their own competences and demonstrate commitment and integrity as team players. By immersing themselves in collaborative projects and tasks, students will foster essential qualities that are highly valued in professional settings, preparing them for dynamic team environments.

This course serves as a catalyst for personal growth, equipping students with the knowledge, skills, and mindset needed to navigate the complexities of organizational behavior. As students embark on their professional journeys, they need to possess a deep understanding of themselves that allows them to make a positive impact as effective leaders and contributors within their teams and organizations.

Short description

The methodology combines individual and team work. Participants will develop different tasks in teams, including a team project, which is an important component of the course. They will also participate in role play, debates, case discussions and simulations. Participants combine their work on team projects with individual reflection. Respectful discussion and debates on the topics addressed are part of the course dynamics. Participants are expected to listen to each other contributions and have a constructive attitude during class discussion. Students are expected to provide each other with respectful feedback that contributes to the quality of their learning processes and personal development. Participation using Moodle and other ICT tools is part of the course dynamics.
